

GERALDINE Chua says music is a very big part of her life.

"It makes me feel happy if I'm sad. Music can touch me inside and make me feel better."

The 19-year-old favours bands like Led Zeppelin and Guns N' Roses.

"Rock music speaks to people and connects to them on a profound level, and that's the beauty of it all."

I'm not afraid of anything.

People find me intimidating.

If I'm happy, I might eat something fattening like a whole tub of ice-cream. I've done that before, actually.

The last thing I bought was a pair of Audio-technica headphones.

I prefer being in a live band bar with a few of my friends chilling out.

I cry when I hear or sing the song Knife by Rockwell because the lyrics remind me of some sad relationships.

I would like to visit Rome to see the Vatican City.

I like the simplicity of the countryside and yet I like the excitement of the city.

Life is short, so I'd rather enjoy every minute of it.

I once went for three consecutive rounds on the reverse bungee-jumping G-max at Clarke Quay.

I love performing on stage. All eyes are on you.

I lost my father two years ago. He was the pillar of strength and supported me in whatever I did.

I wouldn't change anything about me.

Everything that is a learning journey helps you become a better person.

I want to stop global warming because I want all future generations to enjoy life to the fullest and not worry about anything.

I also want to stop all wars.
